

There Goes Time Not running, but racing out!

EVEN THE SECULAR MIND IS CASTING ABOUT FOR some handle with which to steady itself as it makes its way through the world in which we live. There's really no more need for the downtown-street-corner doomsday prophet ... Just about everyone living today can see that things are out of order beyond repair.

In fact, things are so broken on the planet, that even our social math doesn't make sense anymore. The breakdown in logic is on a slow but steady drop into the pit where nothing makes sense at all. Consider the plight of the 18th-century American Colonies: the Colonists found the British government and taxes a burden too great to bear, so the eastern seaboard of North America went to war and eventually broke free from British control ... only to maintain a similar (if not worse) tax system for the new nation; a tax system which was the cause of the war in the first place. Most unbearable taxes are imposed in order to support a growing military which is initially intended to protect the citizens who are its employers, but which ends up protecting itself from the same citizens who cannot, ultimately, afford the taxes due. Today, freedoms are surrendered in order to keep us free.

Consider Mexico. The formerly Aztec nation was conquered and overrun by the Spanish in the 16th century, and endured Spanish rule for 300+ years. The Mexicans lost their culture, their language and their religion. After revolt and much bloodshed, the Mexicans gained their independence and rid themselves of their invaders, only to keep the Catholic religion, which was a major part of the problem in the first place.

With extraordinary speed much of the “educated” and “civilized” world has embraced the doctrine of same-sex-marriage. Even the ancient Greeks and Romans—perhaps the leaders in social decadence—didn't embrace this practice, because ... it wouldn't have made sense. Promiscuity and marriage are two totally different lifestyles; the former simply for pleasure seeking, and the latter for the purpose of having legitimate children.

Christian Bibles have all but been removed from mandatory government-run educational institutions, thus removing any teaching of the need for simple moral restraints. When students later run into moral and social disaster and find themselves amid the walls of mandatory government-run penal institutions, the use and spread of Christian Bibles is encouraged in order to teach simple moral restraints so that inmates may once again function in free society. The situation arising from this short-sighted madness is beyond ridiculous.

The war on the Christian Christmas is another chapter in the strange saga of not-thinking-it-through. Forget for a moment about the dates and seasons being all wrong. The Christian version of Christmas—in all good intention—is obviously religious. But the Pagan version of Christmas—with all its trees and holly and mistletoe and what-not—is also religious.

The “well-meaning” people of our world who embark on the crusade of ridding society of religion really have not taken the time to understand what they have embraced and to what they are giving their energies.

So there is a strange world to navigate in the 21st Century, and we really only have a short time left to us during which we may freely work. Madness beyond insanity is predicted for the human family before the Lord shall return to set us free, and it would be well for us to be careful not to allow ourselves to be swept up in the wave of so-called Political Correctness. The books we have been urged to spread like the leaves of autumn contain all the seed a person needs to cause him or her to ask bigger questions than they have been accustomed to asking. The Bible and the books we publish encourage, no—constrain, the reader to look up, seek after God, and demand more of his or her life. Keep going ...
